

Who does nobody like?

John Teasdale and Justin Robert Young

Warning

Do not play this game.

You will lose your friends, your significant other will leave you, and your family will never speak to you again.

We haven't played it and neither should you.

How to Play

Who does nobody like? is a party game for 3-12 players to play with the people closest to you.

There are four things needed to play: Color Identifiers, Color Cards, Question Cards, and Envelopes.

Color Identifiers identify with color corresponds to which player.

Color Cards are blank and come in the same colors as the Color Identifiers.

Question Cards have questions printed on them about the people who are playing.

Envelopes are normal envelopes. Get them yourself, you need one per player.

Give each player one of the Color Identifiers, remove the unused Color Identifiers and matching Color Cards from the game.

Place the Question cards face down in the middle of the table.

Evenly distribute the Color cards among all players.

Give each player an Envelope.

Take a deep breath.

Each Round

Everyone draws a Question Card and takes turns reading it aloud.

For your question, pick a person in the group who best fits the question and sneakily put a Color Card that matches that person's Color Identifiers into your Envelope.

Everyone pass the Question Card and Envelope to their left. The next person votes on who best fits the question in the same fashion.

This continues until you get the Question Card and Envelope you started with back.

Re-read your Question Card aloud and predict which player has the most cards of their color in the Envelope. If you are correct, you score one point.

You can earn two points by predicting that ALL of the cards in the Envelope are the same. However, if there is any card that is not the color you specify, you get no points.

First to 10.. wins?

Printing Tips

This print and play version of Who Does Nobody Like is the full color version. This cost almost $30 to print at a copy shop. If you don't have your own color printer or know a place with a better deal, we also have a black and white version that will be much cheaper to print.

Printing and cutting will take about 45 minutes.

Print double sided, the long way. Like a book, not a notepad.

Before printing the whole sheet, try printing only pages 3-4. Every printer is different, so make sure that the double sided cuts line up before committing to the whole run.

When you do print the complete run, make sure to print ALL of the pages in this document. If you choose a range of pages, you might end up messing up the double siding. I've done it, it sucks.

For best results, print on card stock. It is a little more expensive, but the paper is thicker, feels better, and last longer.

The backs of each page has cut lines, cut on that side. The other side prints outside the margins so if your printer doesn't line up the sides correctly it will still look nice.

The print shop should have a big paper cutter. Use that instead of scissors. And take your time, it looks much better in the end.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for mental health care, which includes a commitment to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. This strategy is based on the following principles:

• People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and wishes.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care and treatment.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in their own homes and communities, wherever possible.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to work and to contribute to society.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live a full and meaningful life.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated with respect and dignity.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated as equal citizens.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated as full members of society.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated as individuals.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated with respect and dignity.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated as equal citizens.

• People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to be treated as full members of society.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records in a business setting. It highlights how proper record-keeping can help in identifying trends, making informed decisions, and ensuring compliance with legal requirements. The text emphasizes that records should be organized, up-to-date, and easily accessible to relevant personnel.

Next, the document addresses the challenges associated with data management in the digital age. It notes that while technology offers powerful tools for data collection and analysis, it also introduces risks such as data breaches, loss of information, and information overload. The author suggests implementing robust security protocols, regular backups, and employee training to mitigate these risks.

The third section focuses on the role of data in strategic planning. It argues that data-driven insights are essential for understanding market dynamics, customer behavior, and operational efficiency. By leveraging analytics, businesses can identify opportunities for growth, optimize resource allocation, and stay ahead of their competitors.

Finally, the document concludes by stressing the need for a data-centric culture within an organization. This involves fostering a mindset where data is valued and used to drive decision-making at all levels. The author encourages leadership to set the example by basing their own decisions on data and to create an environment where employees feel empowered to use data to improve their work.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are illiterate has increased from 500 million to 700 million.

It is not only the illiterate who are at risk of being left behind. The world's population is growing rapidly, and the number of people who are poor is increasing. In 1990, there were 1.2 billion people living on less than $1 a day. By 2000, there were 1.5 billion, and by 2010, there will be 2 billion.

The world's population is also becoming more diverse. There are now over 200 different languages spoken in the world, and the number of different ethnic groups is increasing. This diversity is a source of strength, but it also presents challenges for education.

One of the biggest challenges is that many of the world's poor live in rural areas where there are few schools. Even when there are schools, they are often of poor quality. This means that many children are not getting the education they need to succeed in life.

Another challenge is that many of the world's poor are women. Women are often responsible for the education of their children, but they often have to work long hours to support their families. This means that they have less time to spend on their children's education.

There are many other challenges facing the world's poor, but these are some of the most important. If we do not find ways to address these challenges, the world's poor will continue to be left behind.

There are many things that we can do to help the world's poor. We can build schools, provide teachers, and give children books. We can also help women get the education they need to support their families.

One of the most important things we can do is to help the world's poor get the education they need to succeed in life. Education is the key to a better future, and we must make sure that everyone has the chance to get it.
